Overview

New developments in the diagnosis and treatment of gastrointestinal (GI) and liver disorders are complex and ever changing, with new research, clinical trials, techniques, and treatments rapidly altering the field. These advances present challenges for practitioners involved in managing patients with these disorders who must stay abreast of this new information and its application in clinical practice.

Specialists in the field of gastroenterology and hepatology will provide useful information and wisdom that comes from varied experiences in treating GI and liver disorders. The latest clinical research findings and their application to clinical practice will be discussed. Topics presented will highlight the latest diagnostic techniques, management strategies, and research developments that impact the care of patients with GI and liver disorders.

Armed with the information from this activity, practitioners providing medical care for or co-managing patients with GI and liver disorders can make timely diagnostic, treatment and referral decisions in the context of patient choice and the resources within their communities. In addition, participants will be able to prepare the patient for what to expect from recommended tests, consultations and recommended treatment plans.

Target Audience

This activity is designed for gastroenterologists, hepatologists, primary care physicians, internists, advanced practice nurses, nurses, pharmacists, physician assistants, fellows, and residents involved in the diagnosis, evaluation, management, and treatment of patients with GI and liver disorders. Additionally, social workers, case managers, and representatives of the medical insurance industry will find this activity useful.

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of this activity, participants should be better able to:

- Assess the latest evidence-based management for the care of patients with gastrointestinal and liver disorders.
- Evaluate the clinical efficacy and safety of therapeutic options for the management of gastrointestinal and liver disorders.
- Review recently published literature and professional society guidelines pertaining to the evaluation and treatment of gastrointestinal and liver disorders.
- Evaluate the latest clinical research findings for gastrointestinal and liver disorder management and their application into clinical practice.

Accreditation

In support of improving patient care, Rutgers Biomedical and Health Sciences is jointly accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME), the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE), and the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC), to provide continuing education for the healthcare team.

Physicians

Rutgers Biomedical and Health Sciences designates this live activity for a maximum of 5.5 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits[™]. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Nurses

This activity is awarded 5.5 ANCC contact hours.

Pharmacists

This knowledge-based activity qualifies for 5.5 contact hours of continuing pharmacy education credit.

Pharmacists' NABP e-Profile ID and date of birth must be entered in your CloudCME MyCE profile. CPE credit will be processed after the program evaluation has closed to participants, which will be three to four weeks following the activity date.

Nurses and pharmacists should only claim those contact hours actually spent participating in the activity.

Physician Assistants

NCCPA accepts certificates of participation for educational activities approved for AMA PRA Category 1 Credit[™] from organizations accredited by ACCME.

ABIM MOC Points

Successful completion of this CME activity, which includes participation in the evaluation component, enables the participant to earn up to 5.5 MOC points in the American Board of Internal Medicine's (ABIM) Maintenance of Certification (MOC) program. It is the CME activity provider's responsibility to submit participant completion information to ACCME for the purpose of granting ABIM MOC credit.

Method of Participation

In order to meet the learning objectives and receive continuing education credits, participants are expected to register for the activity, check in at the registration desk, attend the program and complete an online evaluation at the conclusion of the activity. A CE certificate will be emailed to participants upon completion of the online evaluation.
