Purpose:

Pharmacy professionals are faced with an ever-changing regulatory landscape, complicated by challenges redefined during the COVID-19 pandemic. New practice models featuring collaborative practice agreements require legal consideration to remain within the scope of practice of the pharmacy professional. Health misinformation has spread prodigiously and quickly through online and social media outlets, bringing to the forefront the ethical and legal responsibilities of promoting evidence-based and truthful practices. Finally, vaccine mandates and fallout from the reversal of Roe v. Wade have resurfaced discussion on ethical practice in everyday scenarios. In this activity, participants will learn about regulatory and ethical considerations inherent with collaborative practice agreements, health misinformation, COVID-19 vaccine mandates, and hormonal contraceptives.

Learning Objectives:

At the conclusion of this activity, the pharmacist participant should be able to:

1. Describe collaborative practice agreement requirements with consideration for the pharmacy professional's scope of practice
2. Clarify the ethical and legal responsibilities of pharmacy professionals in combatting healthcare misinformation
3. Explain ethical considerations related to COVID-19 vaccine mandates and the pharmacy professional's role related to hormonal contraceptives
